The world's largest decentralised memorial
Holocaust Education Trust Ireland in association with Dublin City Council

Each stone bears the name of one individual, giving brief details of what happened to them.

Created by German artist, Gunter Demnig in 1992. His vision was to create brass-topped cobblestones embedded in the pavement outside a home or building of significance pertaining to a Holocaust victim.

The six Stolpersteine in Dublin recall the Irish victims of the Holocaust, Ettie Steinberg Gluck, her husband Wojteck and their baby son Leon as well as three other Irish-born Jews who also perished: Isaac Shishi, Ephraim Saks and his sister, Jeanne (Lena) Saks.
